Role of CSP in case of Emergency

Alliance Air has agreement with M/s Blake Emergency Services division of Airline Training Associated Limited whose registered office situate at 29/30 Fitzroy Square, London in case of an emergency.

As per the request from Alliance Air, CSP may be utilized for various actions as applicable:-

- (i) Make provisions for a Joint Family Support Operations Centre to include space, communication and logistical support to assist local and staff.
- (ii) Make provisions for private areas within the hotel medical personnel to collect ante mortem information from families at the site. Alliance Air will also provide quiet space and communications resources for medical examiner personnel to telephonically collect ante mortem information from families who decide to stay away from the site. Alliance Air will arrange required rooms for crisis counseling.
- (iii) Inquire at the time of notification or soon after if family members desire crisis assistance or counseling. If family is undecided or say no, they will be asked to inform their airline representative if they reconsider. All requests for assistance will be passed to designated and duly trained representative in the family member's local area and request they contact the family.
- (iv) Establish a badging system to identify family members.

News Letter/Safety Bulletin issued, under the provision of CAR section 5 series F, part I – Appendix-D

Role of CSP in case of Emergency

- (v) Establish a joint liaison with Local Emergency Command Centre at each supporting medical treatment facility to track the status of injured victims and to provide assistance to their families.
- (vi) Assist family members as they travel to and from the site by informing flight crew and airport personnel that family members are on particular flights. At departure, connecting, and arrival airports, family members will have airline personnel to meet and assist them while the aircraft is on ground in a transit airport. If necessary, Alliance Air will seek assistance from other airlines that may have a larger presence at the airport. Alliance Air will assist family members as they depart the accident site and provide a contact person who will continue to be the airline interface with the family after the family returns to their residence.
- (vii) Secure facilities at departure, arrival, and connecting airports where relatives and friends of the affected passengers, crew and staff members may be initially gathering. These facilities will protect them from media and solicitors, as well as provide a place to receive continuous updates on the reconciliation of the passenger manifest and other information on the accident as it becomes available. If at a secured facility, family members will be notified personally and privately by personnel trained in crisis response and death notification that their loved one is on the plane.
